HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE

Central Piedmont Community College's history centers not so much on bricks and mortar, books and tapes, or research and development. The history centers more on the many people who have played a role in developing the College. A host of unsung heroes—from secretaries to counselors to faculty to administrators—have dedicated themselves to building the great institution that is CPCC.

Since its beginning, the College has been a national pacesetter in education. Standouts on the CPCC roster include a Pulitzer Prize winner, a Metropolitan Opera star, an Olympic gold medalist, a Congressional Medal of Honor winner, a television actress, and a pro football player. Countless others—chefs, health care providers, technicians, real estate brokers, paralegals, firefighters, law enforcement officers, trades people, and others who serve our community—share CPCC's proud tradition.

CPCC has been providing educational opportunities since 1963, the year that the North Carolina General Assembly passed the community college bill. Opening as a fully integrated institution, under the direction of Dr. Richard H. Hagemeyer, the founding president, the College combined the programs of Central Industrial Education Center (CIEC) on Elizabeth Avenue and Mecklenburg College on Beatties Ford Road.

The College sold its property on Beatties Ford Road and developed a campus around the old Central High School complex. Starting with 3.94 acres, the College bought surrounding property, demolished buildings, and closed streets to build the beautiful, tree shaded, 31-acre Central Campus that students and faculty now enjoy.

From the start, the College was different in its teaching methods.

CPCC soon garnered national recognition for its individualized instruction and computer-assisted instruction. In 1970, the College was invited to join the prestigious League for Innovation in the Community College, and today it is still an active member. In 1985, CPCC was named one of the nation's top five community colleges in teaching excellence.

CPCC has grown from a small college with a dozen programs serving 1,600 students to one with over 100 degree, diploma, and certificate programs serving the growing community with an array of credit and noncredit offerings. The College has also become the county's premier workforce development resource, offering its educational services through area campuses and at many high schools and businesses.

After Dr. Hagemeyer's retirement in 1986, Dr. Ruth Shaw became the College's second president. Under her leadership, the College added the Advanced Technologies Center and the Center for Automotive Technology and began acquiring land for area campuses.

Dr. Tony Zeiss, CPCC's third president, has led the College since December 1992. He is devoted to the mission of CPCC and to serving students and the community through customized training and workforce development. Within just a few years of his arriving, the College won recognition as a national leader in workforce development; for example, in 2002 the National Alliance of Business chose CPCC to receive its Community College of the Year Distinguished Performance Award.

Under Dr. Zeiss's direction, CPCC became a multi-campus community college in 1996 with the conversion of the North Area Learning Center in Huntersville to the North Campus. Four other campuses subsequently opened—Levine in 1998, Harper in 1999, Harris (formerly West) in 2001, and Cato (formerly Northeast) in 2002. The College also reaches thousands of distance learning students through the Internet and CPCC TV (Time Warner Cable Channel 17).

Dr. Zeiss is currently leading the Little Sugar Creek Greenway project that will integrate the Central Campus with a unique public park along the stream west of the campus.

On Central Campus, the Information Technology Building, the Overcash Academic and Performing Arts Center, and the Professional Development Building are complete. The façade of the Central High Building is being restored to resemble the original.

On Cato Campus, a new classroom building is open, and at North Campus, a 97,000 sq.ft. Transport Systems Technology building. At Levine Campus, the Joe Hendrick Center for Automotive Technology is open.

As always, the College is growing because the citizens of Mecklenburg County know their investment in CPCC is changing their lives for the better.

THE COLLEGE SEAL

Clint Moody, the first chairman of CPCC's Commercial Art and Advertising Design Program, designed the official College seal. It features a simple tree with five roots and five branches with twenty-three leaves—an adaptation of the tree in the symbol on the west corner of the Central High Building (formerly Garinger Building/Old Central). The tree was inspired by a weeping willow that once stood in front of the building. The leaves represent CPCC's earliest programs; the roots, the five initial areas of study—liberal arts, technical, trade (vocational), adult education, and extension. The crescent at the base of the tree symbolizes the Piedmont Crescent geographical region.

ACADEMIC ATTIRE FOR FACULTY AND STAFF

Since the twelfth century, caps and gowns have been the traditional attire for graduation. Such attire likely originated at Oxford and Cambridge, where the gowns were worn to keep the graduates warm in the unheated buildings. Later, the gowns were adopted by groups of faculty members to symbolize their unity and prestige.

In 1894, the Intercollegiate Commission set a uniform code for the use of caps, gowns, and hoods, in the United States. Except for a few minor changes, this code is followed by most colleges and universities today.

The gowns for the associate, bachelor's, master's, and doctor's degrees differ in basic styling.

The master's gown is similar to the bachelor's and associate except for its long sleeve with square ends that hang below the elbow. The doctor's gown is an elaborate, full-cut and flowing garment marked by velvet panels down the front and around the neck, and by three bands of velvet on the bell shaped sleeves.

Like the gown, the cap or the mortarboard, is traditionally black. The tassel may be black for any degree or in the color of the discipline in which the degree is awarded.

The hood draped around the neck was originally worn as protection against inclement weather. The colors of the lining identify the institution awarding the degree.

Central Piedmont's colors are gold and black. The color of the trimming designates the field of study.

Following is a list of colors used for some of the fields of study:

Anthropology - Dark Blue

Arts - White

Business Administration - Light Brown

Communication - Crimson

Counseling & Guidance - Light Blue

Dramatic Arts - Brown

Economics - Copper
