Student Status: Do you qualify for assistance as an independent student?

Federal student aid programs are based on the principle that the primary responsibility for financing your education lies with you and your parents. As you complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the questions in the Student Status section will help you to determine if you are eligible to apply for financial aid as a dependent or independent student.

In most cases your financial aid eligibility must be determined using your biological/adoptive parents' income and asset information. However, if your family circumstances are such that you are unable to live with and be supported by your biological/adoptive parents because of the involuntary dissolution of the family due to abuse, death, imprisonment, abandonment or if your parents are physically or mentally incapacitated, your dependency status may be reevaluated. In rare cases, you may be considered independent even if you do not meet the criteria on the FAFSA. If you feel that your situation warrants special consideration, you must be prepared to demonstrate that you are, in fact, self-sufficient and be able to document why your parents should not be required to contribute to your education.

You must also provide any court documentation, police records, written statements from yourself and two people who can explain why your circumstances warrant an exception and how you have been supporting yourself during the last year. The written statements can be from an uninterested third party, an adult relative, an adult you have lived with during the past year, a pastor or a counselor. The statements must include his/her relationship to you and what he/she has witnessed with regards to your situation with your parents. It must be signed by that individual, and a telephone number must be included as to where he/she can be reached for further questions. If you live alone, you must also provide documentation such as tax return transcripts, lease agreement, and/or utility statements, etc., to demonstrate your ability to support yourself.

The following conditions, individually or in combination, do NOT merit a dependency override:

1. Parents' refusal to contribute to your education;
  2. Parents' unwillingness to provide information on the FAFSA or verification;
  3. Parents do not claim you as a dependent for income tax purposes;
  4. Student's ability to demonstrate total self-sufficiency.
  5. You do not live with your parent(s).
