

Calvin V. Brock, IV
CPCC Class of 1995

Calvin Brock is a banker, a ranked heavy weight boxer, and a CPCC alumnus. He comes from a supportive family that stressed education, goal setting, and personal discipline. These traits have helped to make Calvin Brock the success he is today. The family support helped Calvin pursue solid educational goals while remaining focused on his ambition to become a professional boxer.

A native of Charlotte, Calvin attended Central Piedmont Community College and earned his two-year degree before transferring to earn a bachelor's degree in finance. After graduation, he worked for a local bank as a call-center analyst and continued his training in the boxing ring. His fellow employees gave him the title "The Boxing Banker."

In 2000, Calvin earned a place on the U.S. Olympic boxing team. He was the first boxer with a college degree to go to the Olympics. It was a thrilling moment for Calvin. Although he didn't come home with the gold medal, the experience gave him new energy and focus.

Calvin has moved on to professional boxing and is among the world's top heavy weights. Calvin manages his own career and has created a diversified investment portfolio that any banker would be proud of.

Calvin believes in giving back to his community and serves as a volunteer for the Big Brothers of Charlotte program.

Central Piedmont Community College is proud to recognize the success of alumnus Calvin Brock, IV.