INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

REQUEST FOR PROGRAM EXTENSION

An F-1 student who is unable to complete his or her program of study by the date of completion listed on item # 5 on the I-20 form must apply for a program extension. Program extensions can be given to students who have continually maintained status.

Acceptable delays that cause the student to require an extension can include changes of major or documented illness. Delays caused by academic probation or suspension are not acceptable reasons for program extension.

You must apply for an extension BEFORE your I-20 expires.

To apply for a program extension you must

- Provide current proof of financial support for one year of study (16,850) from sponsor.
- Meet with an Academic Advisor or Counselor to complete this form.

The International Student Office will prepare a new I-20 for the student with an extension for an appropriate period of time. International Programs will then authorize the extension and notify USCIS: If a student's date of completion of study on the I-20 form has expired and an extension has not been requested, the student is considered to be out–of-status and must apply for reinstatement.
