The following are essential functions necessary for completion of the Ophthalmic Medical Assisting program. They are provided here to help you assess the appropriateness of this career field for you.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>FUNCTIONS</th>
<th>STANDARD</th>
<th>Examples of necessary activities (not all inclusive)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Communication   | abilities sufficient for interaction with people in verbal and non-verbal communication | - receive, organize, prioritize and transmit information
- adapt communication to individuals' abilities to understand with or without reasonable accommodation.
- explain treatment procedures
- interview effectively
- document procedures and patient responses |
| Critical thinking | critical thinking ability sufficient to perform administrative and clinical duties | - prepare and maintain medical records
- schedule and monitor appointments
- recognize emergencies
- document accurately medical records
- apply principles of Aseptic Technique and Infection Control
- maintain confidentiality |
| Interpersonal   | Interpersonal abilities sufficient to interact with individuals, families, and groups from a variety of social, emotional, cultural, and intellectual backgrounds as well as physical conditions. | - establish rapport with patients and staff that projects a positive attitude
- treat all patients with empathy and impartiality
- instruct patients with special needs |
| Motor Skills    | gross and fine motor skills sufficient to perform administrative and clinical duties | - perform medical transcription
- prepare and administer medications as directed by physician
- operate with or without reasonable accommodation equipment safely
- assist physician with examinations and treatments |
| Mobility        | physical abilities that are sufficient to move from treatment room to treatment room and maneuver in these rooms | - prepare and maintain examination and treatment area
- perform first aid and CPR
- prepare patients for procedures |
| Hearing         | auditory ability that is sufficient to assess health needs and perform certain administrative duties | - answering and use with or without reasonable accommodation of proper telephone technique
- perform medical transcription
- interview, and take patient history
- hear auscultatory sounds with or without reasonable accommodation
- listen to patient |
| Visual          | visual ability sufficient for observation, measurement and assessment of patients' needs. To use sophisticated patient treatment equipment | - observe patient responses with or without reasonable accommodation.
- visualize operation and calibration of equipment |
| Tactile         | tactile ability that is sufficient for physical assessment | - take vital signs
- collect and process specimens
- perform palpations, functions of the physical exam related to selected tests that assist with diagnosis and treatment |

I HAVE READ AND UNDERSTOOD THE ESSENTIAL FUNCTIONS OF THE OPHTHALMIC MEDICAL ASSISTING PROGRAM.

SIGNATURE: __________________________________________________              DATE: ___________________

Print name ________________________________________________________________

Rev. 10/14