

Students are classified as dependent or independent because federal student aid programs are based on the idea that student's parents have the primary responsibility of paying for their children's education.

Certain questions on the student aid application will determine whether you are considered dependent on your parents and will be required to report their income and assets as well as your own, or whether you are independent and will only be required to report your own income and assets. For the 2019-2020 academic year, a student is automatically determined to be an independent applicant for Federal Student Aid if he/she meets any one of the following criteria:

1. Born before January 1, 1996
2. Married or separated but not divorced (as of the day the FAFSA was completed)
3. At the beginning of the 2019-2020 school year, you will be working on a master's or doctorate program
4. Currently serving on active duty in the U.S. Armed Forces for purposes other than training
5. A veteran of the U.S. Armed Forces
6. Have or will have children who receive more than half of their support from you between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020
7. Have dependents (other than your children or spouse) who live with you and who receive more than half of their support from you, between July 1, 2019 and June 30, 2020
8. At any time since you turned age 13, both your parents were deceased, you were in foster care or you were a dependent or ward of the court
9. As determined by a court in your state of legal residence, you are or were an emancipated minor
10. As determined by a court in your state of legal residence, you are or were in legal guardianship
11. At any time on or after July 1, 2018, your high school or school district homeless liaison, the director of an emergency shelter or transitional housing program funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, or the director of a runaway or homeless youth basic center or transitional living program determined that you were an unaccompanied youth who was homeless or were self-supporting and at risk of being homeless

A student is not considered independent for financial aid purposes solely on the basis of living outside of the parent's home.

Sometimes students have unusual circumstances, and ask that the financial aid office review their dependency status. The financial aid office provides the following guidelines to students requesting a status review.

1. Independent status will be considered if an irrevocable severance of family ties due to extremely difficult/life threatening situations exist, and the student no longer resides with or has contact with his/her parents.
2. Acceptable situations may include that the student was abandoned by the parents, or was forced to sever ties because of physical or mental abuse, or was faced with a life threatening situation, and the student no longer resides with or has contact with his/her parents.

Detailed documentation supporting the change of status request must be provided by the student.

Students requesting to change their status to independent or self-supporting should be aware that the following situations do not warrant such a change of status.

- ❖ parents refuse to contribute to the student's education
- ❖ parents refuse to provide required information on the FAFSA
- ❖ parents live out-of-state or out of the country
- ❖ student chose not to live with the parents
- ❖ student chose to live with other relatives
- ❖ student chose not to have communication with the parents
- ❖ student will not qualify for aid if parent's income is used
- ❖ student demonstrates total self-sufficiency

Warning: According to the U.S. Department of Education, if you purposely give false or misleading information on form, you may be subject to a fine of up to $20,000 or imprisonment for up to 5 years, or both.
